

WORKING WITH AFRICAN AMERICAN CLIENTS AND FAMILIES:

A FULL DAY WITH DR. NANCY BOYD-FRANKLIN

OUR 13TH GSAPP ANNUAL CULTURE CONFERENCE

For Psychologists, Social Workers, Counselors, Family Therapists and Educators

The Annual GSAPP Culture Conference will provide a very unique opportunity for human service professionals to increase their cultural competence. This year's conference, "Working with African American Clients and Families," will feature a full day of training with Dr. Nancy Boyd-Franklin, an internationally renowned African American author and lecturer. Her conference presentation will provide professionals with invaluable resources for working with African American clients.

Special attention will be paid to:

- Cultural strengths such as the extended family network, kinship care, and survival skills
- Spirituality and religion in the treatment of African Americans
- Therapist's use of self in engaging African American children, adolescents, adults, couples, and families
- Healthy cultural suspicion of many African Americans in response to racism
- Raising the issues of race and racism with clients
- Fears of African American families for their children, especially their sons
- Strategies for assessing and treating drug and alcohol abuse in African American clients
- Clinical case examples and videotaped material will be used throughout
